HAD VISION OF BURGLARS

But Midnight Alarm Turned Out to E ng That Was Easily Put Right.

He likes lobsters. The whole family likes them, in fact. So he brought three of them home the other night. They were alive and he planned to boil them in the morning as usual. He placed them on top of the refrigerator in the back hall. That was a good chance for them to spend the night

It was along toward midnight that the son came home. The rest of the family was abed and asleep. As the son stole into the pantry for his usual forage before retiring he heard a crash and then a crawling, sickening scrimmage that started his hair upright. He sneaked quickly through the kitchen and up the stairs to his father's cham-

"Hey, dad!" in a husky whisper, that brought awakening by its very tenseness, "pass me your gun." "Huh? What's up?" asked his father

we-struck tones. "They've got in at the back door and are trying to open the door into the kitchen." "Dad" followed his son softly down the stairs without stopping for further arguments or garments. Son walked cannily ahead with leveled revolver and pale face. They reached the kitchen and, listening, could hear strange sounds in the back hall Lights were flashed and then with caution and ready for the shock of discovery hey opened the door

There on the floor with their legs twisted about each other lay two of the lobsters, scrapping and fighting. They had evidently started the argument on the refrigerator and wriggled off on to the floor, where they kept it up.-Brockton Enterprise.

Accidental Inventions

The ancients believed that there was a certain kind of mineral substance in existence by means of which all the common metals could be turned into gold. This supposed substance was called the philosopher's stone, and the alchemists of classic times and during the middle ages spent much time and labor in search of this wonderful substance.

Of course, since nothing of the kind ever existed, it was never found; but it is worth remembering that some of the most notable inventions were disbeautiful Dresden porcelain. Roger Bacon, in the same way, discovered the composition of gunpowder; Geber found the properties of acids; Van Helmont discovered the nature of gas, and Doctor Glauber found the secret of making the salts which now bear his name
